All your money controlled forever

‘DIGITAL DOLLAR’ spells end of freedom

THE banks will sell it as safe, convenient and the logical next step, but central bank digital currency (CBDC) is about completely controlling your finances, therefore controlling your life, and everyone else’s.

The ‘digital dollar’ will be very different from the cards and payment apps you use today. This ‘smart’ money will be programmable, so they will be able to restrict how you use it, or even switch it off altogether. It is the tyrant’s ultimate dream – once they control everyone’s money, they can make you do what they want, or restrict you from anything or anywhere at the stroke of a key. No one will be able to save or plan for the future, and we will, in effect, be slaves.

But there is a simple way to counter it and stop it being implemented, because they can never overtly state what CBDC is really for. They will say: ‘most people are paying electronically now anyway, and digital currency will make things safer, easier and more convenient.’

So to prevent it, use cash – everywhere, all of the time. Use ATMs and (if you still have one) bank branches to withdraw cash, and don’t use pay apps or cards if possible. Refuse to go into businesses that don’t accept cash, and support the ones that do. Cash is freedom. See centre pages.

Why are there so many Australians dying?

By www.excessdeathstats.com

On February 24th, the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS) issued a release saying that Australia had 15.1% more deaths than usual in 2022.

HERE'S what they said: "In 2022, there were 174,717 deaths that occurred by November 30th and were registered by January 31st 2023, which is 22,886 (15.1%) more than the historical average."

We owe it to these nearly 23,000 Australians and their families to ask questions.

Is it unusual to have 15.1% more deaths than average?

At www.excessdeathstats.com we wanted to put that number into perspective. So, here's a graph below showing the excess rate of deaths (i.e., more deaths than the average of the past five years) from 1955 to 2021.

Before the highly anomalous year of 2022, the highest annual increase in

That's the equivalent of an Australian Airbus 330-300 crashing every week (297 passengers plus staff). And the total excess deaths of 22,886 equates to a crash every four to five days. Why did these people die?

Before the highly anomalous year of 2022, the highest annual increase in deaths per population was 4.4%, which occurred in 1964.

deaths per population was 4.4%, which occurred in 1964.

Perhaps all the extra deaths have been due to covid, I hear you suggest?

By November 30th 2022, according to the ABS, 9,115 deaths were recorded as being 'from covid'. So, taking these figures at face value means only two-fifths of the 15.1% excess deaths can be accounted for by the virus. In other words, three-fifths of the excess deaths were caused by something else.

Remembering the, perhaps overly-bold, claim that the injections would protect us from severe illness and death if we caught covid, we must ask why, in such a highly vaccinated population, more than nine thousand people died of covid? Surely, it is remiss of the ABS not to report how many people who died 'due to covid' had received the injections?

If it is the case that many of the 9,115 Australians who died from covid in 2022 were 'fully vaccinated' or indeed if they were ever injected at all, we need to be told. Those whom we have given our trust to until now do not have the right to require us to trust that the vaccines are working. After all, we have been put through, we need real-world evidence.

In addition, what is clear from the ABS data is that, over and above the deaths from covid, a lot more Australians died in 2022 than usual. A total of 13,771 non-covid deaths by the end of November. That's the equivalent of an Australian Airbus 330-300 crashing every week (297 passengers plus staff). And the total excess deaths of 22,886 equates to a crash every four to five days.

Why did these people die? This question needs to be answered urgently. If the cause was plane crashes, none of us would be catching a flight. But the cause(s) still need to be examined.

Some of these extra deaths are likely due to population increase - simply because if there are more people in a country (due to immigration), more people are at risk of dying. But we estimate that less than 3 of the 15.1 percentage points that need to be explained can be attributed to this effect.

We are living (and sadly, some of us are dying) as if blindfolded, simply accepting that it's OK not to know why this is happening; It's not OK!

In 2020, any death from covid was headline news. In that year, 906 people were reported dying of the disease. But this statistical information suggests that more than that number of Australians may die every three weeks without proper explanation. In fact the very latest release from the ABS (released 31st March) gives the number of excess deaths in 2022 as slightly higher: 15.3%.

Where is the headline news on that? Australians deserve answers.

Media gaslighting on heart problems and blood clots

By KATE ORSON

FROM extreme heat to shovelling snow in the extreme cold, to sex toys and skipping breakfast... even heart attack preventing exercise is now being rebranded as a risk.

Anything and everything seems to be the cause of heart attacks. Except one potential cause, that seems largely absent from the news – the covid 'vaccines'.

Cardiologist Dr. Aseem Malhotra posted a selection of these headlines on Twitter saying, "I'm a cardiologist with over 20 years experience.

I've published articles in high impact medical journals shifting the understanding of how heart disease develops. Most of the media headlines are BS – either coincidental or deliberate distraction from the real cause".

Back in November Dr. Malhotra appeared on GB News discussing research that suggested covid vaccines increased inflammation of the coronary arteries that could potentially increase the risk of heart attack in one group of patients from 11-25%. Malhotra mentioned that he was also contacted by a whistleblower from the British Institution's cardiology department. Researchers there had also made similar findings, but had apparently decided not to publish them because 'they are worried about losing money from the drug industry'.

Malhotra also said: "anecdotally I've been told by colleagues that younger and younger people are coming in with heart attacks."

In the latter half of 2021 there were almost 10,000 excess non-covid deaths, a significant proportion of which were from heart attack and stroke. There was also a 30% increase of people dying at home – according to Dr. Malhotra, this can often be due to cardiac arrest.

The media's new obsession: 15-minute city 'conspiracy theories'

By REBEKAH BARNETT

'Conspiracy theories' about 15-minute cities are false, unhinged, dangerous, not to be believed, declares mainstream media in unified chorus.

"IN recent years, conspiracy theories that were once almost unheard of have spread like wildfire, with a growing number of Australians now sceptical of things like vaccines, 5G and election results," News.com.au reports in one such article, titled, 'Inside the 15-minute city conspiracy theory sucking in gullible Australians.'

The article explains that 15 minutes cities (also called Smart Cities) are a commonsense way of attempting to boost liveability for residents. City dwellers in proposed Smart Cities – including Melbourne, Paris, London, Edmonton and Oxford – will have access to everything they need within a 15 to 20-minute walk, cycle or public transport trip, and that's really all there is to it.

"Anyone who has ever faced a long and painful commute will immediately see the appeal of having the daily essentials at their fingertips," the article assures readers.

However, 'gullible Australians' who cannot appreciate common sense or convenience have been 'sucked in' to a 'dangerous conspiracy.' These 'unhinged' conspiracy theorists actually believe that Smart Cities are, "part of a secret plan by global elites to restrict people's freedom and movements" – a form of lockdown justified by climate action.

Never mind that Western governments have just spent the past three years abusing their powers with gross overreach and wanton disregard for their citizens' will or wellbeing, which might make some people nervous about giving government more control over movement, commerce, energy consumption and the like. The article notes that conspiracies about 15-minute cities have been flagged as 'false information' on Facebook, so that really settles it, they're definitely false.

The Victorian government confirms that Smart Cities are a benefits-only proposition, as depicted in the nice pastel coloured infographic on the official government page detailing plans for Melbourne's transformation into a Smart City. These plans extend to regional Victoria also. Residents in the Yarra Ranges (just under an hour's drive from Melbourne) report that their council is already implementing a Smart-City urban development framework.

Smart City conspiracy theory reporting comes as the latest micro-meme in the larger meme of 'cooker watch' reporting, whereby media outlets clutch pearls and catastrophise over the proliferation of online 'cookers' expressing distrust in the government and big corporations.

At the same time as whaling in on conspiracy theorists the media has relentlessly and unselfconsciously published demonstrably false theories themselves. Some of these false theories include: natural immunity is not effective, when studies had demonstrated otherwise; your vaccine keeps others safe, long after the high level of 'breakthrough' infections was apparent; covid vaccines do not affect reproductive health, when in fact no studies had been conducted to determine if this was true; and there are no safe or effective early treatments of covid, when numerous studies have identified benefits from repurposed drugs.

In rare edge cases, such as the tragic shooting of Queensland police officers by Nathaniel, Gareth and Stacey Train, the media has been quick to blame conspiracy theorist communities for the violence, hinting at the need for increased regulation of online 'wrongthink' in order to prevent further violence. In reality these things are always complex.

At no point have reports addressed the role of the government in seeding distrust, or of the media in facilitating the marginalisation and even radicalisation of mentally unstable people like Nathaniel Train. Train lost his job due to his vaccination status and endured years of social and economic deprivation and isolation imposed by his government, reinforced by a relentless media campaign in which people of his ilk were portrayed as morally bankrupt idiots unworthy of a place in society. Did anyone pause to consider the effects of such policies and campaigns on those who were already mentally vulnerable? Effects like pushing the already marginalised further out to the fringes of society and discourse?

It looks as though the 'cooker' contingent in Western populations is not insignificant. The Edelman Trust Barometer Global Report of 2023 found that of 32,000 respondents surveyed across 28 countries, nearly half considered the government and the media to be sources of 'false' or 'misleading' information. A quarter of Canadians believe in online conspiracy theories, according to a large poll conducted in 2021. A Rasmussen Report found that more than a quarter of Americans think that they know someone who died from covid vaccines and almost half of Americans believe it is likely that covid vaccines are driving unexplained deaths. A peer reviewed paper titled 'The role of social circle Covid-19 illness and vaccination experiences in Covid-19 vaccination decisions' (2023) found that almost a quarter of respondents reported that they knew someone who had experienced a severe health problem after a covid vaccination and that this was a driver of vaccine hesitancy.

The media's response to the distrust of this fairly significant swathe of the population is to belittle, insult and defame them, ad infinitum. Which makes one wonder – who is the media's 'news' aimed at and what is the goal of such inflammatory content?

So here we go, full steam ahead. Smart Cities are coming whether the people want it or not. The Yarra Ranges council in Victoria has put out a statement warning residents to be "wary of incorrect information circulating in their communities" about Smart City development in the region, which seems to be advancing despite pushback from the local community. In Oxford (UK) Heritage Party leader David Kurten says that the majority of the residents do not want the implementation of the Smart City framework, which thus far has focused heavily on surveillance cameras and limitations on free movement. That the council intends to go ahead with plans regardless of the will of the people "makes a mockery of democracy", says Kurten.

What will be interesting to observe as Smart City planning progresses is what gets implemented first? Better infrastructure and support for small businesses, childcare and playgrounds within local hubs? Or systems and technology to facilitate control of movement, commerce and energy? The Oxford experience hints at the latter.

For the time being the media's great obsession with 15-minute city conspiracy theories gives a tell. Anyone raising questions about the great plans being imposed on us is stupid and dangerous says the mainstream media, delegitimising and shutting down debate. This is how we know that powerful interests are very much invested in Smart Cities moving forward unopposed.

Women's rights campaigners smeared as Nazi sympathisers

By REBEKAH BARNETT

A women's rights rally in Melbourne on 18 March, was hijacked by a group of Sieg Heil saluting Nazi protestors, causing the women's group to be smeared in the media as 'Nazi-allies'. The Let Women Speak tour, led by UK feminist and activist Posie Parker (real name Kellie-Jay Keen-Minshull) staged protests in major Australian cities throughout March to 'protect and promote biological reality,' and to advocate for women's rights.

The Melbourne women's protest was met with a counter trans-rights protest, but the main controversy was centred around the presence of a group of about 20-30 Nazis carrying offensive signs and saluting, causing the women's protest to disperse early. Oddly, the Nazi group was allowed onto the steps of Parliament House for a photo opportunity, before then being escorted by police through a buffer zone very close to the women.

The Australian Jewish Society, along with the Let Women Speak event organisers, condemned the black-clad Nazis who 'invaded' the rally. Conservative MP Moira Deeming has been suspended from the Liberal party for nine months for attending and speaking at the rally. The Victorian Premier, Dan Andrews, is now moving to outlaw the Nazi salute.

On the New Zealand leg of the tour, Parker was physically attacked by a whipped up trans-rights crowd, and had to flee before having the opportunity to speak. Of the chaotic tour Down Under, Parker said, "The world can see the rampant misogyny, I'd call that a win."

Protesting for the Right to Protest

By JERRY ROBERTS

IN January and February 2022, an armada of interstate motor vehicles drove into Canberra where vast crowds kick-started the Australian Freedom Movement as they protested against the crazy Covid mandates. In Canada, truck drivers inspired the world with their transcontinental convoy through the snow to Ottawa.

At the same time in capital cities around the globe hundreds of thousands of people marched and stood at rallies against the absurd extremes of the Covid measures. As we experienced the incomparable exhilaration of solidarity, some of us thought we might be heard in the corridors of power.

A year later we can state with mathematical precision how much influence our numbers and enthusiasm exerted on the political, bureaucratic and corporate thieves in the night who have stolen our country and our world. Zero.

Now our numbers are thinner at the rallies and marches and we are stone cold sober in our assessment of the challenge ahead. We know the only pandemic is the all-encompassing corruption of our institutions and professions. When we chant – “the media are the virus” – we know that truer words were never spoken.

We have settled in for the long haul, educating the public through the new media who stepped into the vacuum left by the spineless retreat of reporters in the mainstream who failed to cover the Covid story, replacing journalism with the twin evils of censorship and propaganda.

Why have the Commonwealth countries – Australia, Canada and New Zealand – set the gold standard for trashing civil liberties in their blatant contempt for the rule of law?

A plausible explanation is that these countries are rich in minerals, energy, food and fibre and that gives the globalist cabal a special incentive to enslave our people by corrupting our elites.

The Australian states today retain their colonial heritage in the office of governor and that position is not merely ceremonial. Government House in Perth remains a focus for the Australian Freedom Movement as the Umbrella People continue their daily vigil that began in December 2021.

When the Covid project commenced, the Governor of Western Australia was Kim Beazley, a scholarly elder statesman of the Australian Labor Party. Every morning, the charismatic figure of Leigh Aldersea, umbrella in hand, stood in front of Government House urging Western Australians to stand in numbers just as the Germans stood peacefully by the Berlin Wall and freed their city.

Every morning we addressed our speeches to the Governor via the microphone at the front gate in St George’s Terrace. Then a rumour floated around the town that Kim Beazley was to be replaced by the Police Commissioner who also held the Orwellian title of Vaccine Commander.

I laughed off the rumour, saying they would not go that far, but on the morning I was due to make a speech, the story was confirmed in a nonchalant paragraph on the front page of The West Australian newspaper. At the microphone, I struggled. This was the real deal. We were living in Nazi Germany of the 1930s. Western Australia was a full-on police state.

We do not bother making speeches to a policeman-governor but we still stand with our umbrellas, a colourful fixture in the city landscape. Commenting on the January arrests of Umbrella People, Perth lawyer Rosie Cornell said this is “a protest for the right to protest,” so that we still have that right when the next wave of the Covid project is launched – the Digital ID and the Central Bank Digital Currency (CBDC) – and we need millions of people to take to the street.

A passer-by who had the misfortune to chat with the Umbrella People when the police were on the warpath asked – “Why are you standing here? You know you can’t win.”

Of course we will win. The human race is not on earth to be guinea pigs for Doctor Jekyll’s cooking up Chinese bat poo in their test tubes. We are not here for the amusement of sick Silicon Valley nerds who want to play God by inserting computer chips under our skins.

It is not the destiny of Australians to be governed by tiny-tot apprentice Hitlers like the present crop of Premiers, nor to be administered by pox doctors’ clerks churned out like sausages from their management factories.

Of course we will win. Our people will wake up. Then they will stand up and we will get our country back.

A year of real-world action

By DARREN SMITH

THOSE who say that holding public events is a waste of time may not be thinking clearly.

While some may feel empowered online, the truth is that social media has become an echo chamber, designed to pacify you with endless dopamine rewards and a continuous flow of new stories to digest, so that we never take focused action on anything.

Hundreds of thousands were on the streets to defy the lockdowns – to show defiance to the unlawful rules, and to let the public know that a huge number of people did not believe what the government was telling us, and weren’t afraid at all.

If this is news to you, that’s because the bought-and-paid-for media refused to show accurate images, or offer balanced reports on those public displays of mass peaceful noncompliance that took place in Australia from May 2020 to December 2021, and still continue across the world today.

When done right, peaceful public assemblies can be powerful statements; they are great opportunities to raise awareness and share information with people who might not otherwise see it because of such censorship. The near-total control of what people see and hear today means that real-world events should be attended by everyone that is able to go.

Not only will you be able to speak to the public, you will also meet like-minded, friendly people who are determined to take action – many local – and begin to have a real social network that you don’t have to plug in and log on to access.

Do not underestimate the value of real friends with whom you can speak freely in person, and form trusting relationships. This could be vital in the years to come, so we can stand our ground together, and so that no one will be isolated or vulnerable if supply chains become severely sabotaged.

Getting people to take part in well informed, peaceful, public noncompliance (because we have the lawful right to do so) is going to take a lot of effort from a lot of people.

Make this the year of action.

Australia's Fair Work Commission captured by government

By Dr JUDY WILYMAN

AUSTRALIA'S Fair Work Commission should be independent from the government, but it has become a tool of the state. This is a situation that has occurred in a similar manner in authoritarian states in the past, including Nazi Germany.

Government capture of the Fair Work Commission has significant implications for our fundamental human rights because, it is the primary reason why employee mandates for experimental mRNA gene injections (falsely promoted to the public as 'COVID vaccines') were permitted to be implemented in 2021.

This action of mandating a medical intervention was contrary to the legislative purpose of the Fair Work Act 2009 which was to prevent discrimination and the use of unlawful practices in the workplace.

But in 2021 the Act was used to create discrimination by requiring employee's medical information, that is protected under privacy laws, to be revealed to employers and by permitting employers to coerce employees into a medical intervention – vaccination – that was not legally permitted in any workplace contracts in Australia prior to 2021.

The mandating of experimental injections by employers has also happened despite Australia signing and ratifying the Nuremburg Code written in 1947 to prevent this criminal situation.

Whilst the Fair Work Commission was supposed to be independent in 2021 this was compromised by its directive for all judges and employers to support the government's policy on vaccination for the 'good of the community': a similar model was used by the head of the judiciary in Germany in 1942-45.

Support from the judiciary in

The mandating of experimental injections by employers has also happened despite Australia signing and ratifying the Nuremburg Code written in 1947 to prevent this criminal situation.

Australia was solidified by the Fair Work Commission's directions to judges, that ensured the judiciary knew they had to rule with the government for the 'good of the community'.

The following comment used in Nazi Germany shows how this solidarity from judges can be achieved:

"At a time when the best of our people are risking their lives... and... tirelessly working for victory, there can be no place for criminals who destroy the will of the community."

It was the judge's solidarity with the government for the 'good of the community' that prevented any citizen from challenging government policy in the courts. In Australia in 2021, as in 1940 Nazi Germany, a tyranny was established due to the courts, the police and the government working in synchronicity for the 'good of the community', without scientific evidence to support this claim.

This 'group think' about vaccination was further enhanced by the bullying culture of the media. Journalists used the word 'antivaxxer' to denigrate as irresponsible, any citizen who questioned the claim that vaccination was for the 'good of the community' or that this untested drug was even a 'vaccine'. Just 'follow the science' they said, without providing any evidence.

The government's insistence that the judiciary, employers, and all employees get vaccinated, also enhanced the 'group think' in the community because vaccinated employers or judges were less likely to uphold the concerns of citizens that opposed it.

The claim that vaccination is for the 'good of the community' is not supported by the principles or ethics of medical practice. Further, it is not being implemented by medical practitioners. The policy is being implemented by politicians under direction from the World Health Organisation (WHO) who is being influenced by the Global Alliance for Vaccines and Immunisation (GAVI).

This is a significant fact because it means global health policies are being designed with influence from private-public partnerships within the GAVI: a body established by the Bill and Melinda Gates foundation in 1999 that includes the pharmaceutical companies, the biotechnology companies, many philanthropists, the World Bank and International Monetary Fund etc.

These are the companies and individuals that profit from the drugs and vaccines that are being recommended with financial incentives in global health policies.

The GAVI alliance is also the body that links the economies of all WHO member countries to public health issues, hence governments acted in lockstep in 2020 to implement policies that removed human rights and destroyed economies under the guise of the 'good of the community'.

All the directives implemented to control an alleged pandemic in 2020 were the opposite to how we have traditionally controlled infectious diseases and promoted health in the community.

In other words, the United Nation's WHO is the front for corporations to influence the design of government health policies. In essence, a one world government with direction coming from unelected foreign individuals and corporations. This is fascism producing global totalitarianism.

Significantly, the WHO declared a pandemic in 2020 without any real data from each country. The declaration was based solely on the mathematical modelling performed by the corporations/institutions in the GAVI alliance that were due to profit from this situation.

The Fair Work Commission in Australia was the primary reason why vaccines could be mandated in the workplace in 2021, even though i) employers did not provide a risk assessment of Covid-19 disease in the workplace or for the Covid-19 mRNA 'vaccines' and ii) the government did not have any legislation that permitted an employer to mandate any vaccine.

When a government legislative body such as the Fair Work Commission modifies the laws to claim that a medication is for the 'good of the community', then it is impossible for the community to push back against this government totalitarianism.

The Fair Work Commission was acting outside of Australia's constitution by supporting government claims about vaccines in 2020, without supportive medical evidence. It was also breaching the human rights covenants that Australia had ratified for decades. Coercive vaccination will destroy the genetic and social fabric of society because all vaccines come with a serious risk for many people.

A quote from Adolf Hitler's manifesto: Mein Kampf explains the actions by the Fair Work Commission with respect to vaccine mandates "The great masses of the people ... will more easily fall victims to a great lie than a small one".

Vaccine mandates are not for the 'good of the community' as they breach the fundamental principle of medicine. They must be repealed forever to prevent the destruction of humanity and it is the medical doctors that must speak up in support of their medical principles and ethics, to ensure that their actions are promoting health and not sickness and death in the population.

Top virologists who changed their tune received millions in grants

By Dr JOSEPH MERCOLA

Two top scientists in virology who initially said they suspected the COVID virus was created in a lab, and who later suddenly did an about-face to say no, it couldn't have been, "suddenly" were the recipients of multimillion dollar NIAID grants, after they made their new opinions public.

IN 2020, Dr. Kristian Andersen of the Scripps Institute and Dr. Robert Garry of Tulane University initially told Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID) they thought the lab leak concerns were legitimate. But they soon backpedaled and the live market theory became predominant.

Interestingly, it's now been made public that after they changed their minds, from 2020 to 2022, Anderson and Garry suddenly had NIAID grants totalling $25.2 million at their fingertips.

In an interview with the Washington Examiner, Justin Goodman, vice president of advocacy and public policy at the White Coat Waste Project, said, "Since changing their tune and publicly dismissing a potential lab leak following secretive conversations with Anthony Fauci, Garry and Andersen have received tens of millions in new taxpayer funds from the NIAID ... for wasteful, deadly, and dangerous virus experiments on primates and other animals."

"Given all of the waste, fraud and abuse we've exposed at NIAID since early 2020, it wouldn't be surprising if gain-of-function's 'funding father' Anthony Fauci was rewarding his fellow animal experimenters for their compliance and complicity in covering up what really happened at the Wuhan lab."

Ditch the enemy in your pocket

By HARRY HOPKINS

Smartphones a stepping stone to humanity's slavery

ALL of us are well aware of the central role that personal mobile devices now play in people's lives.

Haven't we all looked in wonder at the folk walking along the street gazing at the screen in their hand, completely oblivious as to what is going on around them? Aside from the physical danger that this disconnection with reality causes, it is a cast-iron indication that the person concerned has surrendered their inner life to something that has captured their attention in the virtual world.

It is as if a spell has been cast, leading that person from one distraction to another. Can this be a good thing? Can the random capture of a person's thought processes ever be healthy?

How many times have you seen people on public transport, waiting at bus stops, sitting together in groups in the pub, cafe or restaurant with their eyes fixed down to their screen? Groups of people who come together supposedly for friendship and the joys of intimate conversation retreating into the virtual world contained in their personal tracking gadget.

There can be no doubt about it, Silicon Valley engineers have designed, and are constantly redesigning, applications that are as addictive as gambling, alcohol and drugs. When something cannot be done without, and the loss of which is compared to a bereavement, as the loss of a smartphone is to many people today, it is an addiction.

All of this is intentional of course. If there were those who would seek to control every one of us and, indeed,

I firmly believe that 'smart technologies' – and by this I mean not just phones, but anything with the word 'smart' in its description – are being pushed not for our benefit, but because they are all part of the Big Brother society that we are being herded towards every aspect of our individual lives, how would they go about it?

They would seek to make us totally dependent on their highly developed technology, so that any kind of acceptable and worthwhile life would be impossible without it. Are these the ravings of a modern-day Luddite? Well, I love technology: I have a computer and an iPad, but I have an old-fashioned mobile phone, the kind whereby you talk to people and send the occasional text.

I use technology as a tool when it suits me. I'm like the person who drinks occasionally, but knows that overindulgence might lead me down the slippery slope to hell. I firmly believe that 'smart technologies' – and by this I mean not just phones but anything with the word 'smart' in its description – are being pushed not for our benefit, but because they are all part of the Big Brother society that we are being herded towards. It is a vision of a totalitarian state that is a danger to us all.

Consider this: The loss of bank branches nationwide has been going on for years now and is gathering pace. The push for 'apps' to pay for everything rather than use cash is all around us.

Supermarkets are champing at the bit to accept card/phone app payments only. Public transport, public car parks and public conveniences are moving to app payments only. And right now some shops will not accept cash at all (boycott those immediately).

What are the repercussions of this rush to a technological, digitalised world whereby we are what we have on our smart phone? Life is becoming increasingly difficult for millions of people who cannot or will not take on board the technological revolution that is gathering pace.

Many older people have no idea about technology. They cannot access banks because they are not there. They cannot contact their banks because of the computerised systems replacing human beings. 'You are number 27 in the queue' is enough to dishearten and depress many people who live alone and are with minimum support. In short, there are millions of people who are excluded from society because they are not up to speed with technology and this will only get worse.

But where is this headed? I'm afraid that those who pay by the swish of a phone at a checkout, or the admission to a loo by that same seamless motion, are in for a huge shock.

Rather than a utopian dream of having life simplified by technology, we are facing the exact opposite: a complete and total loss of freedom. A life where your every living moment is monitored and controlled by the phone in your pocket.

Your phone knows where you are; it knows where you are going; they will know how much digital money you have and what you spend it on; when and where you access medical care (not in person of course – the digital doctor will see you now); where and when you holiday; if and when you can work. And much, much more.

And once your 'cash' is just an online number completely outside of your control, you will be totally and utterly dependent on the state to allow you to function at all. When this situation manifests itself, you will be owned, and subject to any qualifying conditions which the authorities impose on you in order to live. It is already this way now for millions of people in China.

So what can you do about this? How can you say: "Enough is enough, I want a better world for my children and grandchildren"?

A difficult question. But you can make a major start right now. You can ditch 'the enemy in your pocket' and refuse to use a smartphone. Because if it is allowed to completely control our lives, then it becomes the self-inflicted instrument of our own incarceration. When that happens, life as we once knew it will be but a distant memory.

Programmable digital means the end of free

What is a CBDC?

Central Bank Digital Currency (CBDC) is programmable digital 'smart' money, which will be fully monitored, and can be controlled and restricted in any number of ways.

CBDC will mean the end of privacy, freedom and autonomy for everyone, and total compliance with the whims of the political wind of the day.

Banks have been nudging us into a cashless society for decades - first introducing credit cards in the 1970s, then debit cards, chip and pin, contactless and pay apps.

There is no valid reason to bring CBDC in, other than to gain total control over everyone's finances, and it should be resisted by everyone who values freedom.

Why is CBDC different from what we already have?

Although you might pay electronically now with your card or phone, you currently have full control over what, where, when and how you spend your money, and you also have the option of going to a branch or ATM and withdrawing cash which is always fully private and flexible.

Now we are finally at the precipice of an all-digital PROGRAMMABLE currency, and once cash is gone it won't be coming back.

PRIVACY

CBDCs are blockchain technology – a digital ledger of every single transaction, recorded permanently. Anyone with access, at any time in the future, will be able to look at everything you have bought and sold, every bill and tax you've paid or not, and use anything they find against you.

FREEDOM

'Smart' money means banks will be able to limit where and when you can spend, as well as what you can buy. It could be linked to a carbon allowance, so you only get so much fuel or meat each month. Your wallet could be frozen, or limited to how far from your registered address you can use it.

SAVINGS

Money with an expiry date means you will never be able to save and create financial stability for yourself or your family. Everyone will be living hand-to-mouth and unable to plan financially.

Financial currency freedom

Always use cash

Use bank branches/ATMs to withdraw cash for the day/week, and then spend that everywhere. Keep your card/phone in your pocket.

Paying with cash all the time keeps the infrastructure and jobs in place to service it - bank cashiers, ATMs, ATM build and maintenance, cash tills and transport, security guards, and everyone involved in producing, transporting and dealing with cash. Once this is gone it won't be coming back, so keep it alive and give them no excuse to go 'all-digital'.

They will never say: 'It's to control everyone's finances so we can make you do what we say.' They will say: 'It's because everyone uses apps and cards anyway, and this is the logical next step.'

Ditch the apps, and use your cards to withdraw cash to spend everywhere, and where they don't take cash, don't spend.

Help us get the message out

Central Bank Digital Currency is programmable digital 'smart' money, which will be fully monitored, and can be controlled and restricted in any number of ways. It will mean the end of privacy, freedom and autonomy for everyone, and total compliance with the political whims of the day.

How data capitalism makes YOU the product

By ANDY THOMAS

Big Tech's goal is to automate human beings

UNTIL the late 1970s, computers were large and expensive contraptions and, as such, they were the preserve of governments, universities and corporations.

Computers were often referred to as mainframes, a term derived from the fact that they were housed in large metal cabinets. A single mainframe would typically be used by many people via dumb-terminals from within the same building.

By the 1980s, however, the PC had arrived on the scene. The significance of the word is lost now, but it was revolutionary at the time because "PC" once stood for "personal computer". This meant that it wasn't shared with others, but was yours and yours alone.

Unlike the 80s, the computing devices we use today are not really ours any more – even though we are the ones who pay for them. For example, the continuous software updates common in modern devices facilitate a backdoor allowing any change to be made or restriction imposed, at any time, without our knowledge, consent or control.

In reality, our smartphones and laptops are tools used to monitor what should be our private communications and interactions. Android phones, as a case in point, typically upload between 4.4 and 13.6 MB of tracking data to Google servers every day.

Where people once used terminals to access a central mainframe, modern computing devices are now the terminals used to access people.

How on earth did things come to this?

If there is one thing that computers do well, it is automation. Although it was once widely held that the internet would engender freedom, with the benefit of hindsight it should be no surprise that the large-scale automation it actually facilitates lends itself to the economies of vast scale, rather than those of small or medium sized enterprises.

As a result, the traditional model of capitalism, in which companies compete for paying customers in a free market, is breaking down. In its place has arisen surveillance capitalism – a phoney capitalism in which the product may ostensibly be free, but behavioural data is harvested from its users in order to exploit them in other domains.

Such data is not only be used for the targeting of ads, but also in highly manipulative ways through the use of subliminal cues and nudges, and rewards and punishments in order to nudge people into profitable behaviours.

In order to succeed, this must happen below the level of everyday awareness.

Indeed, it has succeeded and beyond the dreams of avarice. We can see now the inspiration behind so called 'Smart Cities' and the UK government's 'Nudge Unit'.

While a cost-benefit analysis may be out of scope here, it is far from clear that the internet has universally improved the quality of human existence. Rather, it now threatens us with a new kind of tyranny – one which aims to subject every aspect of human existence to automated surveillance. We need only look to the Chinese Social Credit System to see what such a future would look like.

It may be a tad depressing to realise that the primary motivation behind the worldwide rollout of 5G is not to simply provide everyone with fast internet on the go, but to facilitate the so-called 'Internet of Things', in which even the most trivial of devices will be online and under AI control.

History, however, is full of upheavals in which all that once seemed so certain is uprooted in short order. The sudden and very unexpected collapse of the Soviet Union is a case in point.

I'm not about to suggest that the internet will suddenly cease to exist, and that we will somehow be transported back to the 1980s. What I am suggesting is that the business model of surveillance capitalism – which has succeeded thus far by quietly looting everyone – is unsustainable long-term.

In her seminal work, The Age of Surveillance Capitalism, Professor Shoshana Zuboff writes that Google – the first company to exploit human behavioural data – understood that users would never accept the unilateral claiming of their raw human experience in exchange for being able to use free online apps. Therefore, it was necessary for Google's services to act as a one-way mirror in order to keep people from realising the true nature of what was being taken from them.

It is the compulsion of every technology company, however, to automate the very thing at the heart of their value generation activity, and it is this which will ultimately kill the goose which lays their golden egg.

"It is no longer enough to automate information flows about us; the goal now is to automate us." – Shoshana Zuboff.

In the end, the people will own nothing and there will be nothing left for surveillance capitalism to plunder.

As we now belatedly wake up to surveillance capitalism, and begin to see it for what it really is, we must reject it and reclaim our sovereignty. Moreover, we must reject the 'everything free' model as being too good to be true, and expect to conduct honest transactions in exchange for things of real value, without surveillance and manipulation.

Computers and smartphones won't be going away, but we can reimagine the personal computer for the 21st century as a privacy-centric device under the control of individual human beings, rather than a big tech singularity.

De-Google'd phones, for example, running alternatives to Android and iOS are now available and demand for them is starting to grow. For laptops and desktops, Linux represents a perfectly viable operating system for everyone – even for the most non-technical of users.

The real game changer, however, may be the widespread adoption of open source software such as NextCloud and Mastadon. These are 'back-end' applications which allow individuals, groups and small businesses to host their own private clouds and social media networks.

In the future, we shall have no need for surveillance-based services.

twofold: first, to test the technical feasibility... and second, to utilise the skills and insights of private businesses in terms of technology and operation, for designing a CBDC ecosystem in the possible event of social implementation," Uchida said.

The move comes after more than two years of proof-of-concept experiments by the BoJ around the digital yen, even as China's digital yuan continues to lead the CBDC race, which has now extended to more than 105 countries representing over 95% of the world's total GDP.

The move also comes at a time when the BoJ is set for leadership transition, with Kazuo Ueda expected to take over the top job from Haruhiko Kuroda when his second five-year term ends in April.

In November 2022, Stock Market Index Nikkei reported that, starting in the spring of 2023, the BoJ would work on experiments on a digital yen with three mega-banks and regional banks in the country.

Forage is power

By REBEKAH REEVE-JONES

The reality of growing and harvesting our own food and medicine is very different from what we know and have already.

OUR food and medicines are sterilised, packaged and presented to us in such a way that we need to withdraw from it, become adept in foraging and farming and take back ownership of our food production. It can only start with us and with our local nature.

Over 70% of pharmaceutical drugs are derived directly from plants. Bizarrely, we are made to believe that a plant must be standardised in order to extract its potential in healing. I beg to differ.

If you believe in natural selection, then you can believe a plant has adapted for its survival within its surroundings to create perfection in its entirety. The reductionist model of orthodox medicine completely and blindly misses this synergy and the dynamics of this symbiosis and co-reliance in nature. Holistic medicine is the only way forward in helping us rid ourselves of the idea of separation from nature.

We are shifting to a more Palaeolithic instinctual and impulsive (fight or flight) situation. We constantly ask ourselves, 'where is the right place to be, where is the safe place?'

We dream about scaling down, living off grid, community living, sustainability, and learning ancient skills. We need to begin manifesting these thoughts into actions, otherwise we become stifled and imprisoned and our creative energies mutate into angry toxic interactions on social media. We become sad keyboard warriors and lose sight of our aspirations.

Seasonal nature walks enable us to learn more about herbs and wild foods that grow locally. Only connecting with these plants all year round gives us this knowledge. The truth is, without it, we are nothing, and slaves to big pharma and supermarkets.

Actively taking charge of your health and becoming responsible for it gives a massive finger to a nanny state which wants to drug and spoon feed you into submission. There is nothing more endangering to a tyrannical government than a people who know how to feed and heal themselves.

Having a deeper relationship with nature makes us less likely to fall for the tricks of manipulation and control in society and arrive at our own core values.

There are thousands of herbs, the vast majority of them are completely edible and have medicinal and nutritional value. Many have been researched and although only some are commonly used today, there is evidence a great many herbs have been forgotten through history. Only around 130 plants should be avoided or are poisonous – make sure you know the plant is not poisonous before using it! With this in mind, nibble testing plants (taking a small 2 x 2mm piece and chewing it, then spitting out all of the plant and saliva) uses a chemical analysis laboratory called your mouth.

For example, take a dandelion leaf – what you are tasting is bitter; it stimulates your salivary glands, the endocrine system, the gall bladder, the liver and cleanses your blood. You are putting a flood of chemistry into your system, which provokes the most advanced biological body we know to respond and process it at a cellular level.

This is our body computer, and is fundamental towards waking up our perceptions and instincts – reactivating those tools that are our senses, and the processor is taste. If we don't, we stand to lose it and let artificial technology win by changing our biological brains to a point where they become unrecognisable.

More than 70% of pharmaceutical drugs are derived directly from plants

The rewards for learning about plants and stepping out of your comfort zone are immeasurable. Benefits include free herbal medicine, which I can assure you as a medical herbalist is abundant and plentiful everywhere, reduced depression and GP visits, increased exercise and vitamin D, free sources of food, more autonomy, mindfulness and inevitably this helps heal communities and makes people happy.

With your hands scratched and soiled from nature's terrain, with dirty nails and windswept hair, it is possible to then understand the fractal of life. The macro to micro, our terrain earth, each and every one of us a human terrain, a perfect reflection on a smaller scale. The germ theory becomes redundant, mere fodder for the uninitiated, but that thought can keep for another time.

Why magnesium is THE most important mineral missing from your life!

By CLIVE DE CARLE

Magnesium helped to save my life thirty five years ago

MAGNESIUM is the key mineral that is missing from our soil and hence our food. With the advent of industrial farming, pesticides and other farming practices that strip the soil of nutrients, the loss of magnesium has perhaps been the most disastrous for human health. The addition of chlorine and in some areas, fluoride to the water supply, inhibits the bioavailability of magnesium even further. Stress, the daily use of sugar, caffeine and pharmaceutical drugs further depletes the body's supply of this vital mineral.

Magnesium is now known to be essential for thousands of enzymatic reactions in the body, including the transmission of nerve impulses, muscle movements, gene maintenance, food metabolism and protein formation. It is required to give the "spark of life" to the metabolic functions involving the creation of energy and the synthesis of proteins.

Almost everything depends on it!

How do I know if I'm deficient in Magnesium?

Symptoms can include one or more of the following:

- Muscle cramps / twitches / restless leg / contractions / tremors / spasms
- Menstrual cramps / PMS
- Heart variability / palpitations / rapid heartbeat / arrhythmia / atrial fibrillation / atherosclerosis / hypertension (high blood pressure)
- Depression and irritability / anxiety / panic attacks / hyper-excitability / confusion / personality changes / delirium / hallucinations
- Dementia and neurodegenerative diseases
- Diabetes (type 2) / metabolic syndrome
- Weakness / fatigue / fibromyalgia
- Rheumatoid arthritis / osteoarthritis / osteoporosis
- Low calcium levels / calcium stones
- Sound and light sensitivity
- Insomnia and sleep apnoea

- Nausea / vomiting / loss of appetite
- Migraines / headaches
- Low serum potassium and parathyroid levels
- Kidney disease
- Potential death from heart failure

Magnesium Benefits

Whilst magnesium is vital to address the above deficiency symptoms, ensuring the body has a plentiful supply can be life changing. My own experience of curing my arthritis is testament to the healing power of this miracle mineral.

Stress / Anxiety

Also known as "nature's chill pill", sufficient magnesium levels restrict the release of stress hormones such as cortisol, and acts as a filter to prevent them from entering the brain. Excess cortisol contributes to anxiety, brain fog, depression, memory loss, insomnia and many other mental disorders.

When the body is under stress it creates stress hormones which cause a cascade of physical effects which quickly consume magnesium.

Another way that magnesium helps to combat stress is by binding to and stimulating GABA receptors in the brain. GABA (gamma-aminobutyric acid) is an inhibitory neurotransmitter that slows down brain activity. When GABA is low, the brain can become stuck in the "on" position, making it extremely difficult to relax.

Heart Health

The most extreme example of chronic magnesium deficiency is a heart attack. When the body's supply of magnesium runs out, the heart is unable to relax its contractions which results in heart failure. This is known in emergency rooms the world over – if a heart attack patient survives long enough to get to hospital, they are immediately injected with magnesium sulphate.

Magnesium helps to regulate heart rhythm, co-ordinating the activity of the heart muscle and the nerves that initiate heartbeat. Low magnesium levels can cause heart palpitations and arrhythmias (irregular heartbeats).

It stops the coronary arteries from having spasms which can cause the intense chest pains known as angina. Magnesium relaxes the muscles that control blood vessels, allowing the blood to flow more freely, whilst helping to equalise the levels of potassium and sodium in the blood.

Brain Boosting

With the highest concentrations of magnesium found in the brain and the heart, it is known that decreased brain electrical activity is correlated with low magnesium levels. In his book, "Magnesium, What Your Doctor Needs to Know", author Nolan Edwards states, "For maintaining plasticity of synapses, adequate magnesium content in cerebrospinal fluid is essential. Magnesium is used for the proper activity of many enzymes within brain cells that control memory and cellular function."

Long and short-term memory are also reliant on an adequate supply of magnesium. Dr Timothy Sheehan describes the mechanism of magnesium in the brain in his book, "The Oscillating Brain": "Magnesium ions are the 'gatekeepers' between NMDA (short for N-methyl D aspartate) neuroreceptors and the cell membranes. These neuroreceptors are responsible for both short-term and long-term memory. Without adequate magnesium, there is essentially no 'soldiers at the gate' to block the free flow of ions, and this can lead to cell death, and issues related to short and long-term recall."

Supplementing with magnesium might be the most life changing thing you can do right now! The most dangerous side effect is smiling.

A brief history of the technocracy

By NIALL McCRAE & ROGER WATSON

IN 1919, the Technical Alliance of North America was formed in New York, with a reputable multidisciplinary membership from science, education, architecture, mathematics and medicine. The group drew on the principles of scientific management of FW Taylor (initiator of the production line at Ford Motor Company).

In 1932, its leader Howard Scott met, and soon after joined M King Hubbert at Columbia University, New York. Under the new name of Technocracy Incorporated, Scott and Hubbert presented a blueprint for a North American Technate, a highly regulated society with control of energy, based on constant monitoring of citizens. The main objectives were organisation of all industry into a few centrally-planned corporations, equal state income for all (now known as universal basic income), with bureaucracy and scientific experts replacing political government.

Bankrolled by the Rockefeller Foundation, Technocracy Inc. had a large membership in North America in the 1930s. Members distinguished themselves by their coats and suits of a particular shade of grey; they also bought cars in that colour, with orange hub caps. However, the heyday was brief, partly because the radical plan was a bridge too far for technology of the time, and also due to the overshadowing New Deal interventionism of Franklin D Roosevelt. Technocracy Inc. was riven with opposing factions, some supporting the government, but others frustrated by its slow progress and missed opportunities. As war broke out in Europe, leading members urged Roosevelt to declare himself as dictator.

Three decades later, David Rockefeller wanted the best brains on his pet project to solve global problems of the present and future, including relations between capitalist and communist countries and the impact of population growth in the developing world. Like Technocracy Inc., many of these minds were from Columbia University (also the seat of cultural Marxist Herbert Marcuse). On 23 and 24 July 1972, seventeen chosen experts in finance, international relations and political science met at the Rockefeller estate in Pocantico Hills, upstate New York, to create the Trilateral Commission. At a final planning meeting in Tokyo in January 1973, chairmen were appointed for the three regions of trilateralism: Western Europe, Japan and North America, with Zbigniew Brzezinski as director. Headquarters were sited in Manhattan.

In October 1973 the executive committee of the Trilateral Commission warned that while the threat of nuclear war had diminished, 'new problems have emerged to heighten the vulnerability of the planet', and that 'humanity is faced with serious risks to the global environment'. Following in the footsteps of Technocracy Inc, the Trilateral Commission espoused supranational control of resources and population. Energy would be the currency. Cash, private ownership,

M. Wood, who produced the twin-volume Trilaterals over Washington (1979, 1981). However, the Trilateral Commission has successfully stayed out of the limelight. To most ordinary people, its role in American politics is an untold story; neither the organisation nor Brzezinski are mentioned in standard texts on modern US history, despite their seminal role.

In the UK, the Trilateral Commission worked behind the scenes on foreign policy, hastening the transition of Rhodesia to independent Zimbabwe under Robert Mugabe. Prime Minister Jim Callaghan was a member, as became his foreign

Artificial intelligence, a cashless society and digital passports for everyday activities are being introduced with little resistance, as people are duped into accepting encroachments on privacy and freedom for convenience and safety elections, free speech and protests would be abolished, enabling a coterie of experts to reign unhindered by individual rights or elections.

In a 1974 article in Foreign Affairs, a publication of the Council on Foreign Relations, economist and Trilateral Commission member, Richard Gardner, described the 'hard road to world order'. The strategy would ensue not by sudden shock but by stealth; a frog would immediately jump out of hot water, but would not react to slowly boiling water until too late. A gradual globalist coup would thrive on episodes of disorder, exploiting a 'booming, buzzing confusion'.

An important objective was control of the media. Heads of national television networks and prestigious newspapers such as the Washington Post and New York Times were invited to join the Trilateral Commission, on condition that proceedings remain private. This ethically dubious practice has corrupted the mainstream media; journalists know on which side their bread is buttered. Approaching the 1976 presidential election, the Trilateral Commission exerted its considerable media influence in its determination to get the right man in the White House.

Public awareness of this shadowy but highly influential organisation was minimal but for the investigative work of Anthony Sutton and Patrick secretary David Owen, and so too was his counterpart in Margaret Thatcher's government, Lord Carrington. Several Tory ministers have contributed to the Trilateral Commission's pursuit of an 'international rules-based order'. Of particular interest is Sir Keir Starmer, a Trilateral Commission member for many years, who became Labour Party leader after only one term as a member of parliament. Since legacy leftist Jeremy Corbyn was ousted, Starmer has resumed the centrist progressive policies of arch-globalist Tony Blair.

The Trilateral Commission has had considerable influence on the United Nations by pushing the doctrine of sustainable development, which really means control of food, fuel and other resources. However, while members continue to occupy positions in the Washington 'deep state', the Trilateral Commission has been overshadowed by the World Economic Forum (WEF). Led by Klaus Schwab, a German financier of Rothschild lineage, the WEF is less shy of publicity, holding annual conferences at Davos in Switzerland attended by the media.

Like the Trilateral Commission, the WEF is tightly engaged with the United Nations, promoting Agenda 21/2030 and calling for urgent action against 'anthropogenic climate change'. The World Health Organisation, a previously unremarkable UN agency, suddenly became powerful in response to the Covid-19 pandemic, directing national governments in imposing unprecedented 'lockdowns' and mass vaccination with digital passes. Draconian restrictions on livelihood and liberty were fully supported by opposition parties; indeed, Keir Starmer regularly urged stricter measures, despite disproportionately affecting the socio-economically disadvantaged constituency that Labour is supposed to represent.

Exploiting the emergency, the WEF has called for a 'great reset', as described by Schwab and Thierry Malleret in a book of that title. The abrupt 'new normal' envisaged by the globalists consolidates gains for the 'fourth industrial revolution', a concept promoted for many years by Schwab with striking similarities to the tentative plans of Technocracy Inc. almost a hundred years ago. Indeed, technocracy – the replacement of elected government by social engineering – is being realised by stealth. Artificial intelligence, a cashless society and digital passports for everyday activities are being introduced with little resistance, as people are duped into accepting encroachments on privacy and freedom for convenience and safety.

A command-and-control system, technocracy is easily confused with either communism or mega-capitalism. But it has no interest in political ideology or a free market. China, under its notionally communist regime, is at an advanced stage of technocracy. Klaus Schwab speaks positively of China despite the obvious human rights abuses of its social credit system.

In the West, the UN network of Smart Cities is redesigning urban life, restricting our freedom to gather socially, to speak freely or to protest, while obliterating privacy. Development of a central digital currency, proposed 'online safety' laws and the permanence of some Covid-19 regulations demonstrate further progress.

At best, the technocrats are the town planners of the mid-twentieth century, on a grander scale. Concrete housing estates were meant to shape a new society, in defiance of individualist traditions

('an Englishman's home is his castle' and 'good fences make good neighbours'), but these schemes failed miserably.

There is nothing inherently wrong with collectivisation, but the social engineering of technocrats eschews the time-honoured identities of faith, flag and family. At worst, they are forging an almighty superstate that brings to life Brave New World, how Aldous Huxley imagined technocracy.

In the 1940s, with the internet a distant dream, Orwell's Nineteen Eighty-Four presciently described a society controlled by video surveillance, while The Abolition of Man by CS Lewis warned:

"What we call Man's power over Nature turns out to be a power exercised by some men over other men with Nature as their instrument."

Whatever the origins of the outbreak (some suspect it was planned), Covid-19 has certainly been exploited by globalists. Back in 2017, Klaus Schwab boasted of how the World Economic Forum was infiltrating governments around the world with its leadership programme. He specifically mentioned Canadian prime minister Justin Trudeau, adding that 'we penetrate the cabinet'; indeed, 'more than half of his cabinet are actually Young Global Leaders'.

Indeed, Trudeau imposed one of the strictest Covid-19 regimes in the world, and when a truckers' protest against vaccine mandates camped outside the parliament in Ottawa, he invoked a state of emergency. His deputy, Chrystia Freeland (whose grandfather was a prominent Nazi), declared the freezing of protestors' bank accounts without trial. After riot police and army were deployed to brutally quash the peaceful protest, member of parliament Colin Carrie asked whether the WEF had too much influence on Canada, the speaker of the House of Commons said that he couldn't hear the question, before a minister stood up and accused the questioner of peddling conspiracy theory. Both of these appointees are members of the World Economic Forum, for whom there is apparently a conspiracy of silence.

Censorship masquerades and disinformation control

By ANDREW LOWENTHAL

TWITTER files #19 have dropped. I am happy to have assisted Matt Taibbi and team to put that release together, along with release #18.

The Files show widespread censorship masquerading as “anti-disinformation” and intense collusion between government agencies, NGOs, academia, Big Tech, media, philanthropy, the intelligence community, and more.

Tinfoil hat stuff? The Twitter Files show it is real.

They uncover a level of corruption that is hard to grasp, much of it among the ‘anti-disinformation’ and digital rights fields where I have worked for almost 20 years.

To say this is disappointing would be an incredible understatement. A 180 on what I understood to be our values.

Twitter Files #18 and #19 focus on the Virality Project, an “anti-vaccine misinformation” effort led by Stanford and bringing together elite academia, NGOs, government, and experts in AI and social media monitoring, with six of the biggest social media companies on the planet. They went far beyond their “misinformation” remit. Twitter Files show the Virality Project pushed platforms to censor “stories of true vaccine side effects.”

Partnered in the effort were Facebook/Instagram, Google/YouTube, TikTok, Pinterest, Medium, and Twitter.

Reporting side effects of the now-pulled Johnson & Johnson vaccine would have been labelled “misinformation” under Virality Project decrees. Had Kerry Phelps (the first female president of the Australian Medical Association) taken to Twitter to describe her and her wife’s vaccine injuries, these too would have been labelled misinformation. German Health Minister Karl Lauterbach would have also been censored last week for admitting that as a result of the vaccines “there are severe disabilities, and some of them will be permanent.”

Rather than listening out for safety signals to protect the public, leaders in the “anti-disinformation” field ran for cover to protect Big Pharma, smearing and censoring critics. The moral depravity is astounding and quite possibly criminal.

The Virality Project however is just part of a broader cultural shift that reverses long standing liberal/left commitments to free expression and allows censorship in the name of protection and safety. However, in suppressing “stories of true vaccine side effects” the Virality Project put people in danger. Rather than keeping people safe they exposed us to the depredations of Big Pharma.

The centrality of censorship ideology to the digital rights field is illustrated in former New Zealand Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern opening RightsCon 2022, the sector’s biggest civil society event. EngageMedia co-organised RightsCon in 2015 when I was Executive Director. Ardern claims that “weapons of war” and “disinformation” are one and the same.

RightsCon 2022 also heavily promoted US Secretary of State Anthony Blinken. Blinken oversees the State Department’s Global Engagement Center, one of the most egregious US government promoters of “anti-disinformation” as censorship. (See Twitter Files #17)

Western leaders who advocate for censorship in the name of “disinformation” severely undermine those fighting authoritarian regimes around the world. Those regimes frequently evoke the threat of “fake news” to justify their crackdowns.

Is disinformation an actual problem? Yes, though it is overstated and the “anti-disinformation” field is making it worse, not better. It is also contributing to increasing polarisation.

I encourage you to read both releases in full and hold what you have been told about Elon Musk just for a moment. Musk is neither hero nor demon. The Twitter Files however are a critical catalyst to challenge the new censorship regime we now live under and reinvigorate the movement for free expression.

(Note that I am a paid consultant for Matt Taibbi and have no relation whatsoever to Musk).

If you can walk and chew gum you’ll know that uncovering liberal/left corruption doesn’t imply support for the reactionary right.

Free speech and expression protect us from the most powerful actors on the planet; corporations, the State, and a growing plethora of international bodies. Ultimately, we need radically decentralised social media that is more immune to their capture. Our safety depends on it.

Many have come before me, however far too few have been willing to challenge this ethical fall from grace. The good news is that it’s not too late.

The gift of natural immunity

By DR PHILLIP ALTMAN
BPharm (Hons), MSc, PhD

DO you remember the so-called ‘health experts’ told you that natural immunity developed after SARS-CoV-2 infection was of no importance? You must still get vaccinated... “get vaccinated”, they cried! “Don’t be stupid!”

Remember that? I do. It is now looking like the unvaccinated who have had Covid-19 have been given the gift of long-term, durable natural immunity from SARS-CoV-2. The vaccinated and repeatedly boosted people with vaccine damaged immune systems are showing up in such large numbers in hospitals around the world that many governments have ceased categorising the numbers of hospital Covid-19 cases as vaccinated or unvaccinated. The NSW Dept of Health stopped recording these figures from the beginning of this year because the statistics showed there was a direct correlation between the number of jabs and the number of hospital Covid-19 cases. It got very embarrassing.

You may recall that the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) which was largely responsible for Covid-19 vaccination policy worldwide, despite employing more than 10,000 people, steadfastly refused to investigate the effectiveness of natural immunity to protect people from Covid-19. Amazing! They did not want to look! Why?

The answer is obvious, isn’t it? If people knew they had natural protection from infection and did not need to risk getting an experimental gene-based so-called ‘vaccine’, with potentially life-threatening adverse effects and no long-term safety data they would choose not to get the jab. This would contribute to vaccine hesitancy. This would be very bad news for Big Pharma vaccine sales.

The current coverup of the true deaths and serious adverse events due to the so-called ‘vaccines’ and the suppression of Ivermectin prescribing for Covid-19 are other government tools to minimise vaccine hesitancy.

Big Pharma knew that ultimately, despite massive media censorship and regular bogus advice from the health experts who shill for the industry, that people would find out the truth about natural immunity. So they started a clever marketing campaign which said that natural immunity is good but adding a booster to natural immunity increases your protection from serious disease. You have heard this, I am sure. The only problem with that is there is no clinical proof that boosters add to your protection – in fact boosters can be deadly. People are dying around the world unexpectedly in their millions since the introduction of the gene-based so-called ‘vaccines’.

It was only a matter of time until the dirty little secret was let out. The well-known YouTube commentator, Dr. John Campbell, has now done just that. A study now published in Lancet has shown that there was about 90% protection from serious disease produced by the more virulent variants of SARS-CoV-2, and this protection was at least as good as vaccination or even better than vaccination.

For so-called ‘health experts’ to deny the importance and usefulness of natural immunity for so long and encourage unnecessary vaccination is incomprehensible... you should never trust them ever again. Remember their names. All those who played this game were shills of Big Pharma and these same clowns will undoubtedly pop up again in future. Remember them.
